In May 2014, the official Call of Duty website was updated with aԁ

83; scrambled image that was due to be revealed on May 4, 2014, but the trailer was leaked ahead of schedule💷 on May 1 and then officially released soon after. The trailer revealed actor Kevin Spacey as portraying a character in 8183; the game who resents democracy.[45] The trailer contained a variety of fut uristic technologies, including cloaking aircraft, twin-rotor drones, hover bike s,💷 "spider" tanks, specialized weapons, powered exoskeletons, threat-detection grenades and gloves that allow their wearer to climb up walls.

One particular moment💷 of the game that was singled out by revi ewers and players alike was Will Irons' funeral service, where the player 28183; is prompted to press a button to approach the coffin; on the PC version, this particular prompt read "Press F💷 to Pay Respects." The me chanic was criticized and ridiculed for both being arbitrary and unnecessary, as well as being inappropriate💷 to the tone of the funeral the game otherw ise would like to convey.[78][79][80] The phrase has since become detached from&
